

An initial interest in drafting led Jonathan to enroll in a five-year undergraduate program at the School of Architecture at Syracuse University, where he is studying to become a structural architect. Before graduating from Cardinal Ritter College Prep High School in St. Louis, Missouri with a 3.8 GPA, Jonathan was an enthusiastic participant in various activities such as varsity football, varsity track and field, martial arts, community service, and organizing benefits to raise money for his school as well as other community organizations. He also held leadership roles in his school newspaper club, art club and math club, and was a member of multiple national scholastic organizations. Currently, Jonathan is preparing to enter his sophomore year at Syracuse in the fall of 2010 and will continue to pursue extra-curricular activities that develop his knowledge base and help further his career goals.
